COOPERATIVE EDUCATION OPPORTUNITIES EXPLORED AT THE OHIO STATE FAIR

DAYTON, Ohio, August 3, 1982 -- At the Ohio State Fair in Columbus the Ohio Cooperative Education Association will be spreading the word to high school students and their parents -- there is a way to go to college even though state and federal funding is harder to get. The University of Dayton, along with 29 other colleges and universities and 70 employer organizations in the state of Ohio, will be available in the Bricker Building to discuss their cooperative education programs, August 6 through 22.

Cooperative education is a program of alternating terms of work and classroom instruction that enables a student to earn money while learning practical applications of the curriculum. At the University of Dayton over 400 students participate in the Cooperative Education Program with over 100 area employers. A UD representative will be at the fair August 7 through 11.

In addition to the information available, a drawing for a $1,000 scholarship, to the institution of the winner's choice, will take place on Saturday, August 21. To register for the drawing and learn more about cooperative education visit the Ohio Cooperative Education booth at the Ohio State Fair.
